The news on the Ethiopian Airlines upcoming flight from Addis Ababa to Jakarta, linking the Southeast Asian island nation with Africa, has been widely reported by international media outlets. Ethiopian Group CEO Mr. Tewolde GebreMariam announced the planned launch of the flight on the sidelines of the Indonesia-Africa Forum held in Bali, Indonesia on April 11, 2018.

Speaking about the upcoming flight, Mr Tewolde said, “The three days direct flight from Addis Ababa to Jakarta will not only help to connect Ethiopia and Indonesia but it will also play a vital role to connect all African countries with Indonesia and other South East Asian Countries.”

Indonesian Foreign Minister Retno LP Marsudi, who held discussions with Ethiopian Group CEO, for her part said, “We talked about connectivity because it matters in supporting economic, trade and people-to-people cooperation. Hence, the agreement on the direct flight is a breakthrough for Indonesia-Africa economic ties.”

The Foreign Minister and Mr. Tewolde also signed an agreement on aircraft maintenance services for Indonesia’s national flag carrier, Garuda Indonesia. The Indonesian government also expressed its interest to designate Addis Ababa as the hub of Indonesia’s visa services for other African countries.

Ethiopian and US Embassy Inaugurate Ultramodern Baggage Scanner Machine

Ethiopian and US Embassy unveiled a state-of-the-art baggage scanner machine on April 9, 2018 at a colorful event attended by H.E. Mr. Michael Raynor, Ambassador of the United States to Ethiopia, Mr. Tewolde Gebremariam, Group Chief Executive Officer of Ethiopian Airlines, Mr. Gary Seffel, Transportation Security Administration (TSA) Regional Representative, as well as members of Ethiopian Executive Management and the TSA team. The new scanner machine, which is provided by the US government, is the first to be installed in the African continent, and represents the latest technology for baggage scanning.

Ethiopian Airlines has always been one of the most significant sources of business cooperation between Ethiopia and the United States and the relationship includes the airline’s massive investments in Boeing aircraft and partnerships with giant American companies like Sabre, General Electric (GE), Honeywell, and AAR. The installation of the ultra-modern Baggage Scanner Machine is a testimony to the ever blossoming partnership of the two countries.

Ethiopian Group CEO Congratulates the New FDRE Prime Minister H.E Dr. Abiy Ahmed

Ethiopian Airlines massive airport expansion and hotel projects were featured in a recent news report at China Global Television Network (CGTN), in the context of the Airline’s contribution to Ethiopia’s growth. Explaining about the significance of the airport expansion for the improvement of Ethiopian service, Ethiopian Group CEO Mr Tewolde GebreMariam, told CGTN’s correspondent in Addis, “We have now reached about 10 million passengers per annum. The airport capacity was 5 million per annum. So there is a congestion today. This is meant to relieve that congestion and give us more room for growth. By the completion of this project, we will be able to accommodate around 22 million passengers.”

CGTN’s report also included the ongoing hotel construction project which is now 55% complete. The construction work is being carried out 24/7 and is expected to be completed in September 2018. Summarizing the overall contribution of Ethiopian Airlines to the growth of Ethiopia, the Group CEO added, “We are right at the center of the Growth and Transformation Plan. We are bringing tourists to this country; we are promoting a good image of the country; we are heralding to the world that Ethiopia is now a completely different country. We are heralding the renaissance of Ethiopia.”

CGTN’s correspondent concludes his news report saying, “Remember the name Ethiopian Airlines with its current success both on the ground and in the skies. But the next time you hear about Ethiopian Airlines, it is going to be the next big thing out of Africa and the world.”

Allison Foat, a travel journalist based in Cape Town, travels around the world featuring her discoveries in her popular blog Cape Town Diva. Allison’s travel passion recently brought her onboard one of ET’s flights which lasted for six hours. Though the blogger had economy class ticket, she was upgraded to Cloud 9 where she experienced the best of Ethiopian customer service!

Allison describes the comfort of the business class and the superb service with an array of delicious Ethiopian cuisine and drinks, saying, “As soon as you board, you know uber relaxation awaits… you settle into your ample seat-come-flat bed and it’s all fabulous from then until touch down. With your screen up, it feels as if you’re in your own universe and you can lose yourself in your own thoughts, read, do some work or snooze as and when the mood takes you.

“I was really curious about the Ethiopian dishes on the menu and had been looking forward to trying them out. Chef YoAnnis has created a varied menu that is the perfect intro to traditional fare – food is a smart way to market a destination and it’s great that Ethiopian has put together such a comprehensive choice for those unfamiliar with the country and its culture.”

Africa-US air transport security cooperation

By Kaledyesa Belede

Four African countries including Ethiopia agreed to bolster cooperation with the US to ensure air transport security.

Ethiopia, Kenya, South Africa and Egypt, countries which operate direct flights to the US, have agreed to strengthen cooperation with the US Transportation Security Administration (TSA) to ensure safe and secure air transport between Africa and the US. The decision was disclosed on Tuesday at the TSA Regional Industry Summit hosted by Ethiopian Airlines at the Ethiopian Aviation Academy.

Opening the regional industry summit, Bekele Aweke, chief commercial officer of Ethiopian Airlines, said that safety and security is the primary focus area for Ethiopian airlines. "Ethiopias are a country and Ethiopian Airlines as a leading operator in Africa give a priority for safety. We always cooperate with concerned authorities to ensure secured air travel," Bekele said.

Bekele reiterated Ethiopian Airlines' commitment in collaborating with TSA in various areas. "TSA has always been in our side. They have been supporting us in building a robust security system and meeting all the international standard security requirements," he said.

Airport and air traffic security experts from TSA, Ethiopia, Kenya, South Africa and Egypt attended and deliberated on security issues that enable them to find strategic solutions to security and air transportation. Insider and regional threats, cargo screening and passenger interviews were some of the issues discussed at the regional summit.

TSA Regional Director for Africa and Middle East, Jason E. Schwabed said the summit brought together experts from the TSA to work with the specialists from airlines that fly directly to the United States. "We are grateful for the partnership of Ethiopia and we are also working to solve security problems as well as to better explain some of the TSA programs and guidelines," Schwabed added.

Stating that Ethiopia and US have excellent relationship, the Regional Director said, "we want to showcase the partnership and cooperation that we have in relation to security because we believe it is everybody's responsibility to ensure safety.

The security experts drawn from various countries shared their experiences on the innovative ways of solving security issues. Many thanks to experts from TSA, Ethiopian Airlines, Kenya Airways, South African Airways and Egypt Air as well as Turkish Airlines took part in the regional Regional Industry Summit.

-African Airlines see 6.3 per cent growth in traffic, says IATA

African airlines saw a 6.3 per cent rise in traffic compared to February 2017, according to recent figures released by the International Air Transport Association (IATA). Airlines in Latin America posted the fastest year-on-year growth for a second consecutive month in February traffic, jumped 9.8 per cent, up from 8.1 per cent growth in January. They were followed by Asia-Pacific airlines which experienced a 9.1 per cent rise in growth compared to a year ago thanks to healthy regional economic growth and expansion in the number of routes on offer. While traffic from North American and European carriers climbed 7.2 per cent and 6.8 per cent respectively. Across Africa, seat capacity rose 3.3 per cent, and load factor (the proportion of available capacity taken up by the aircraft) climbed 1.8 percentage points to 65.8 per cent.

Traffic growth occurred amid an improving regional economic backdrop, especially in Nigeria and South Africa, where business confidence has risen sharply over the past year. David Olaya from IATA, who wrote the Air Passenger Market Analysis February 2018 report, commented, "International revenue passenger kilometres (RPKs) flows by carriers based in Africa grew by 6.3 per cent year-on-year in February. The upward trend in traffic remains solid, and may find further support from a tentative improvement in the region's largest economies: business confidence in Nigeria has risen sharply over the past 12 months, helped by recent rises in oil prices, while a reduction in political uncertainty in South Africa recently helped business confidence to return to positive territory for the first time in more than a year." Total RPKs for the month rose 7.6 per cent, compared to February 2017, up from 6.6 per cent year-over-year growth in January. "As expected, we saw a return to stronger demand growth in February, after the temporary slowdown in January. This is being supported by the robust economic backdrop and solid business confidence. However, increases in fuel prices and labor costs in some countries likely will temper the amount of cost stimulation from lower oil prices this year," said Alexandre de Juniac, IATA's Director General and CEO.
Disagreement between air traffic controllers, authority grounds flights

By Neamin Ashenafi

All flights in and out of Addis Ababa, Bole International Airport, were halted for about two hours on Tuesday, April 17, 2018 due to disagreements between air traffic controllers and the Ethiopian Civil Aviation Authority.

Ethiopian Communication Manager, Anley Kibetu told The Reporter that due to internal disagreement between the Ethiopian Civil Aviation Authority management (ECAA) and Air Traffic Controllers (ATC), flights were halted for about two hours.

She said that, “Since the issue is an internal matter between ECAA management and the ATC, it is better to receive details of the information from them.”

“Although there were disruptions of flights at the Bole International Airport, the problem was solved quickly and things are back to normal now,” Anley added.

The Reporter’s repeated effort to get a hold of officials at The ECAA did not materialise.

Nevertheless, based on the statement issued by the authority to public broadcaster on Tuesday, air traffic controllers held a strike which lasted for little more than hour because of a grievance related to a holiday allowance and rumors that the authority is going to withhold the payments.

Aviation Group announces expansion projects

By Yonas Abaye

The Ethiopian Airlines Group has announced a double expansion project for Bole International airport in order to resolve the growing air traffic congestion.

The expansion project sees an additional air strip built both inside and outside the existing Bole International Airport facility to accommodate the growing air traffic turnover and the services of private airline operators in Ethiopia.

The Group disclosed the project during a nine-month performance report presented by the Transport Affairs Standing Committee of the House of Peoples’ Representatives (HPR).

Presenting the report, Henok Tafesse-Deputy CEO of the Ethiopian Airlines Aviation Group-explained that the national flag carrier has continued its successful performance beating its major contenders in the international market.
Ethiopian Enhance Rental Fees on Airport Businesses

By ENASHI TADESSE
FORTUNE STAFF WRITER

Ethiopian Airlines Group has made a 450pc to 5.60pc rental fee increases on the services providers operating on its premises.

Ground handling companies, logistics, private airline companies, cargo service providers are the companies that the Group review rental fee. The company provides the airport with a minor, storage, loading and unloading, services, and all these service and transporting cargo inside the terminal.

The decision was made by the Group two months ago and was communicated to the companies with a written letter.

The Ministry of Finance & Economic Cooperation (MoFEC) has been providing the Group with a budget. Although it is about 5pc and excludes the Group from the federal budget, as it is a business-oriented state enterprise, according to Tewolde Gebremariam, CEO of the Ethiopian Airlines, one of the Group's business units.

"We are informed that we need to source budget by ourselves," Gebremariam said.

Last fiscal year Ethiopian generated 2.7 million dollars revenue, with a net profit of 251 million dollars. Months back it inaugurated a new cargo terminal contracted for 150 million dollars on a 150,000sqm of land, with a capacity of accommodating 60,000ts of air cargo a year.

The International Cargo & Aviation Services (ICAS), Africa Flight Services, National Airways, and Trans National Airways (TNA), are among the companies asked to pay the augmented rental fees.

The ICAS has been paying an annual rental fee of 2 million dollars for the Group. Last year it was asked to pay 2.7 million dollars, which is 1.75pc higher than the current price, while Africa Flight services was requested to pay 6pc higher than the initial amount.

For an office space with an area of 350m at the Bole International Airport, ICAS has been paying a monthly rental fee of 7000000 E.c per month. The Group had informed the company to pay 1,2000000 E.c per month.

"Due to this, we showed our office and moved," said a management member of the company, who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

"The raise will encourage the companies and make them learn," said an airline expert with two decades of experience. "It will end up creating a monopoly in the industry."

However, Tewolde, argues that the price revision was made after conducting a comprehensive assessment.

"The price amendment is reasonable," he told Fortune. "Most of the companies were paying a nominal fee."

ICAS has been operating passenger services, such as check-in, arrival and transfer, load and unload, and special services. The company also provides cargo services, such as cargo handling, export services, document handling, and special cargo handling.

With an approval under the leadership of Wamnete Gebretsadik (PPEO), who was the minister of Transport, ICAS had initiated providing ground services. It has been operating out of its two offices, one on the premises of Bole International Airport and the other in Addis Ababa, with the availability ofskid trucks and special cargo handling services to the companies.

Following the grievances of the service providers, the Group and the companies have started negotiations with the intervention of the Ministry of Transport (MoT).

"The negotiation seems positive," said a source close to the case, "till the negotiations ends none of the companies have paid the requested amount."

Melissa Twigg, a contributor to the Vogue (the world’s leading magazine publishing fashion and culture stories) recently wrote an article on the magnificent Lalibela churches after visiting the site. Mesmerized by the architectural beauty of the churches, the awe-stricken writer suggests Lalibela would be the next Machu Picchu, the site of an ancient Inca city in Peru registered by UNESCO as World Heritage site and visited by many tourists every year.

Melissa was so touched by the majestic beauty of Lalibela churches that he says tears were brought to his eyes when he first set foot at Lalibela. Concerning the churches, Melissa writes, “These churches are perfectly preserved today, both delicate and monumental, impossible to detect at a distance but utterly majestic up close... Unlike many of the world’s most impressive sites — Angkor Wat, say, or Notre Dame — Lalibela throbs with a living religious fervor. The handful of foreign visitors are rendered all but invisible by the thousand-strong crowd of monks and nuns, hermits and worshippers, children and grandmothers.”
